

Dolce at Symphony Place: Extravagance is Sweet.

Sometimes a development comes along that alters the face and character of a city forever. Years ago, the transformation of the BC Hydro office building into The Electra spearheaded the residential revival of our city's core. More recently, our new Library stretched the eastern boundaries of Vancouver's cultural activity. Today, it is Symphony Place.

This landmark community is the foundation of the revitalization and changing face of Vancouver's arts and entertainment district downtown. And, downtown lovers and investors alike are recognizing this fact, as proven by the sales success of Vita, the first tower at Symphony Place, developed by leading Lower Mainland builder, Solterra. In only a short time, Dolce, the highly anticipated sister tower to Vita, will be released for sale, thereby giving more Vancouverites the opportunity to be part of this visionary community.

At Dolce, life is sweet and living is spectacular! Start your day with a work-out in the fully equipped gym, followed by a relaxing visit to the steam-room and spa. Expand your mind at the Art Gallery or the Library. Lunch can be a casual snack at Granville Island or classic French bistro fare; or explore one of a multitude of ethnic opportunities on your doorstep. Afternoons can be filled with friends in the park; or shop till you drop along Robson Street. And tonight — take your pick: theatre, music or film from around the world. At Symphony Place, the endless pleasures of la Dolce Vita are yours to enjoy everyday.

Dramatically rising 32 stories at the corner of Richards and Smithe, Dolce will continue to brand this new landmark as the connoisseurs' location of choice. Designed by award winning Merrick Architecture, Dolce's distinct urban West Coast style will blend in seamlessly with Vita to complete this emerging cosmopolitan community. Sophisticated apartment residences will range from intimate studios to luxury two bedroom-plus-den homes, with penthouses approximately 1,800 square feet in size. A limited selection of one or two bedroom townhomes and one bedroom lofts, will ensure that you find a Dolce home to best suit your lifestyle.

The Dolce discovery centre is scheduled to open this Spring at 897 Richards Street.
